This seminar series, funded by the Urban Studies Foundation, brings together a diversity of scholars from the fields of critical urban studies, political ecology, ecosystem services, and nature-based solutions. The aim is for these scholars to share their work, identify research frontiers, and consider how social justice and equity are addressed and enhanced through their fields of study. This webinar represents the kick-off event of the seminar series, and is open to the public. The invited speakers will briefly introduce their work in the form of 5-minute 'lightning-' or 'speed-talks', and then engage in a panel discussion and Q&A session with the audience.
